FRENCH AND ELOCUTION.

BREWSTER FREE ACADEMY.

Brewster Free Academy was named for Mr. John Brewster, by whose bequest it was liberally endowed. It continues the life of the Wolfeborough and Tuftonborough Academy, which was chartered in 1820, and which maintained its corporate existence until its charter was amended and its name changed in accordance with the will of John Brewster, in 1887. Among the long list of former students of the Wolfeborough and Tuftonborough Academy, that of the Hon. Henry Wilson is perhaps most widely familiar.

The original building, which formerly stood upon the site of the present Brewster Memorial Hall, is now located just back of its former site, and, under the name of the Pickering School, is used for the graded school of the village.

It was stipulated in the will of Mr. John Brewster that the name "be changed, and thereafter continue to be that of the 'Brewster Free School' or 'Academy' ". It was further required that "no restriction (shall) be placed upon any person desiring to attend and receive instruction from said school or academy on account of his or her age, sex or color, provided only he or she is of good moral character"; and, that instruction in the academy should be "as nearly as possible free".

Under the amended charter the academy is governed by a board of trustees, of which board the Principal of the academy and the three trustees of the estate of John Brewster are ex-officio members.

Following the instructions of the will of John Brewster, the trustees secured for a campus a particularly suitable tract of land, comprising more than forty acres, sloping gradually to Lake Winnipesaukee, with a shore frontage of half a mile. No more beautiful situation could be found in New Hampshire. Upon this campus a building of the English Collegiate type was erected in 1887. It was designed to be a part of a much larger ultimate structure, which might not only serve the use of a modern and growing academy, but also suggest something of the historic educational tradition. This building was destroyed by fire in 1903. Two years later the present building, fire-proof, and thoroughly modern in every particular, was completed and formally dedicated. It contains the Principal's office, a large hall or chapel, seven recitation rooms, a physical laboratory and a room fitted for instruction and practice in book-keeping, stenography and the various commercial studies. In the basement are lockers, lavatories, shower-bath and vacant rooms which may be used for manual training. The hall is a valuable adjunct to the social life of the Academy.

In a separate building is the Chemical Laboratory. The laboratory is fairly well equipped with apparatus and material for experiment and instruction, although the building itself is temporary and inadequate.

Living accommodations for a limited number of girls are provided in the Estabrook. Excellent board is provided at a price that barely covers the actual cost, and a parlor and a music and recreation room afford the necessary relief from the occasional monotony of school life. Students in the Estabrook are under direct supervision of the teachers, and are carefully protected in every possible way.

A limited number of boys find rooms in the houses of the several instructors, and are permitted to take their meals at the Estabrook. It is probable that a dormitory for boys will be built within a short time.

MAIN BUILDING—FRONT.

ADMISSION.

Students are admitted upon passing the prescribed examinations or presenting satisfactory testimonials from other schools. Applications for admission should be accompanied by testimonial to the good character of the applicant. The restricted accommodations make it impossible to admit more than a limited number. And it is the settled policy of the Academy not to sacrifice the standard of scholarship by unduly increasing the numbers.

EXPENSES.

To carry out the purpose of providing the best possible secondary education at the lowest possible cost to the student, all that immediately pertains to that education is furnished free. There is no charge for tuition in any department. For the present the necessary books, paper, pencils, chemicals and laboratory materials are also furnished, free.

Living expenses, as indicated above, are reduced to the lowest practicable limits. The cost of room and board at the Estabrook is from $4.50 to $6.00 per week. In special cases students may be permitted to board in approved private families, but it is not the policy of the Academy to encourage this.

Particularly energetic and capable students find it possible to reduce their expenses in various ways, and this, within proper limits, is encouraged. But no student should come to the Academy from a distance without resources enough to provide for at least the first term,—or, better still, the first year. The necessary expense for room and board for the year should not be more than $175.00.

COURSES OF STUDY.

Three courses of study are offered, the classical, the scientific and the commercial. Courses in Stenography and Typewriting, recently added, make it possible to give, in the commercial course, a good, elementary business training. The classical and scientific courses are designed to meet the requirements of the various colleges and technical schools. Certificates of the Academy are accepted in place of examination, by the colleges represented in the New England College Entrance Certificate Board, as the Academy is on the approved list of that Board. Certificates are not granted to every graduate of the Academy, but to those who during the four years maintain an average grade of not less than seventy percent.

The Academy prepares students for the best colleges and schools of technology, but its work is directed always to one supreme end, to develop intellectual character, honesty, simplicity, intelligence and power.

Eighteen periods of lecture or recitation each week for four years are required for graduation. In addition to this, a specified amount of work in elocution and music is required of all students.

DISCIPLINE.

The Academy does not promulgate an elaborate system of arbitrary rules and artificial penalties. It requires good work, good manners, good conduct and good character. Students who are hopelessly deficient in either respect are quietly asked to withdraw. As the Academy receives no income from the students its discipline is not affected by financial considerations. On the other hand, this is a school of life as well as of letters. The aim of its discipline, therefore, is not to punish but to correct minor deficiencies, or defects, in character and conduct.

Students are expected to keep study hours, and to lend their influence to the maintenance of good order. Absence from the town, or from any school exercise, is not permitted, save in exceptional cases.

RELIGIOUS STANDING.

In accordance with the wishes of the founder, the Academy is strictly undenominational. But it is not irreligious. Students are required to attend chapel exercises every morning, and to attend the morning service at one of the churches in town, Advent, Christian, Congregational, Free Baptist, Roman Catholic, Unitarian.

ATHLETICS.

The Academy recognizes the educational value not only of physical development but also of athletic sports. And it encourages and liberally supports athletics, subordinate always to the more directly vital interests. Professionalism in athletics is not tolerated. The persistent effort is to maintain clean sport, and to develop the athletic life within the school. Incidentally, a few friendly contests with teams from other academies are held each year.

A separate building is used for games of basket ball, and together with rooms in the basement of the main building, serves as a rudimentary gymnasium. A well equipped gymnasium is, perhaps, the most pressing material need of the Academy.

COMMERCIAL ARITHMETIC, LAW AND CORRESPONDENCE.

A course in Commercial Arithmetic is offered, five hours a week during the fall term.

A course in Commercial Law is offered, one hour a week throughout the last year.

A course in Commercial Correspondence is offered, one hour a week throughout the last year.

A two year course in Stenography is offered during the last two years. The first year's work is devoted to theory and perfection of detail. The second year's work includes phrasing, contracting, reporting and speed work. The Isaac Pitman system is taught.

MUSIC AND ELOCUTION.

The aim of the instruction in music is to enable every pupil to read music at sight. One period is devoted to individual or chorus work.

Training for public speaking is the work of the elocution department. Study in this department is required of every pupil. The divisions recite bi-weekly, and in the last two years a standard play is presented.

PHYSICAL TRAINING.

During the last half of the fall, the winter, and the first half of the spring terms the girls have regular drills in proper costume, under an instructor.

During the same time, the boys are given daily work in "setting-up" exercises, in dumb bells and Indian clubs and indoor work on special apparatus.

Baseball, football, basketball, hand ball and indoor gymnastics receive attention during the proper seasons.

Special attention is given to securing a proper carriage.
